Dear Francis:

In my article on the horseshoe Bristol - broad filament lamp, at one place I say:

"Thus the atmosphere of romance, which has surrounded this lamp by reason of the dramatic accidents with which it flashed ~~it~~ out of a previous darkness in the art of electric lighting, has not attached to its physical self, but is only preserved in the memories of its inventor and Francis Tehel, the last of those living that heard the 'Eureka' which greeted it, and in historical accounts x x x x."

Then below will come the following foot-note: -

"* Mr. Tehel, a year or two later, went to Europe in connection with the introduction of the Edison system, and for years was Manager of the electric system of Budapest (Hungary), always, however, retaining his American citizenship.
He has been in this country since the war."

Please let me know at once whether it is O.K. or make any correction in the interest of truth.

Mr. Francis Tehel,
40 W. 40 St.,
N.Y. City.

Sincerely,
Chas. L. Clark
